

I say yes I say yes I say yes

Yes every single time the words pour over my tongue like it's the only phrase I've ever known Bitter and grotesque cutting deeper through the muscles of my tongue my mouth struggles to form the words

I say yes I say yes I say yes

Over and over until that is all I am and you look at me as if you know but still don't mind

You look at me as if these words were never mine and I was the one who had told you that it was your fault you look at me and I am lost

I say yes like my life depends on it because tonight it does and between these sheets of faking laughs and broken bones I see the most disgusting parts of you and I can't help but say yes to keep myself alive

I say yes

because it's all that I can do tonight is say yes I say yes I say yes

I say yes I say yes I say yes

to survive
